A PIOUS FRAUD.

Chancery Court-Damage Suit-The Law Docket-Camboose Court Proceedings-Other Items.] Petition for divorce was filed yester-day by Mary W. against Francis W. Morrow. The bill is written in a romantic style, and relates that while on a visit to a married sister in Conway county, Ark., she met and loved the gallant Francis, and on the 19th day of the cold and bleak December, when the snowbirds were gathering crumbs about the back kitchen door and the heart of the plumber was glad, their beating hearts were united. Her susceptible heart of the plumber was glad, their beating hearts were united. Her susceptible heart was smolbered by the sweetness of his smille, which was of a calm, religious texture, and she was further led to considerable and crooked his arm by carrying a basket all exture, and she was further led to con-ide her roseate future to his keeping by day long and half the night, mysteriously

To place them on the rock pile would place these little children in company with a class of degraded prisoners, whose association would tend to harden them in crime. I shall therefore request that the parents of these children take them out into the court-yard and perform an act which, if it had been done sooner, would not have to be done now." At the sound of her voice the dead woman moved, turned over on her side and at last sat up. The eyes opened, and in a thrilling voice the woman who had been dead, but who lived again, spoke. Mrs. Fossett said she had been in heaven; that she bad there enjoyed a happiness it was beyond her power to tell; that she had met and talked with her mother, long dead, and with other friends. Two consecutive short crops of cotton and lower tendency of prices are bothering the great cotton brains.

POLITICAL difficulties in Europe are causing an awfully unsettled condition of the cotton and all other markets.

Stort cotton fell off another 1-16c in New York yesterday, making 3-16c declines during the current week.

The Memphis Cotton Exchange will decide Satarday whether it will or not become a member of the National Exchange.

The Cornice-workers are progressing rapidly with the ornamentation of the roof of the new Cotton Exchange building.

The absorbing talk in cotton circles now is what effect the declaration of war in Europe would have upon the price of cotton.

Substitute and the rather primitive methods which marked former exhibitions of the kind.

The American Field says in its last issue:

The St. Louis Gun Cinb has secured the services of George Munson as superintendent of the coming bench show, to be held April 21st to 24th, and has also rented the held April 21st to 24th, and has also rented the held April 21st to 24th, and has also rented the nave of the grand Exposition building, which is one of the handsomest huildings for exhibitions in America. This is Mr. Munson's first attempt at dog show management, but he has been identified for several years with successful outdoor sporting enterprises, and is an experienced newspaper man, and fully expable of conducting the bench show successfully.
